

Landscape planning of Aspindza and its surroundings for town planning

MARIAM SANDROSHVILI

mariami.sandroshvili220@ens.tsu.edu.ge

Department of Geography

The Faculty of Exact and Natural Sciences

IVANE JAVAKHISHVILI Tbilisi State University

1 Ilia Tchavtchavadze Avenue, Academic Building I, 0179 Tbilisi, Georgia

SUMMARY

Ensuring the sustainable social-economic and ecological situation became a fundamental condition for developing civilized world.

Territorial spatial planning is the main tool for state's sustainable development and increased living standards. Its function is to ensure rational territorial organization, establish strong connection between land use and different types of agriculture, balance the requirements of state's economic situation with respect to inevitability of environmental protection and reach the social-economic goals according to recent requirements.

Nowadays the most of the countries strive for principals of sustainable development that increases interest towards territorial special planning significantly. Through the agency of those principals it is feasible to get economic, social and ecological benefits for country and draw up more stable and calculative conditions for investigation and development.

This gives guarantee of development to local population and promotes rational use of land and natural resources.

The object of the research is the territory of Aspindza and its surroundings, where as a result of During the research it was conducted field and office activities have been discussed all the problems which was presented in the research area.

As a result of the social survey, the development prospects of Aspindza and its surroundings and had discussed with the population.

Various tables and thematic maps in geoinformatic systems (GIS) have been created as a result of existing and new information.